

```
In [1]: import matplotlib.pyplot as plt

In [2]: #Task 1 – Swiggy Delivery Times delivery_times = [32, 28, 45, 30, 36, 40, 29, 34, 38, 31,27, 41, 33, 35, 39, 37, 44, 30, 29, 32,36, 28, 43, 31, 35, 40, 38, 33, 30, 42]

plt.hist(delivery_times)
plt.title("Swiggy Delivery Time Distribution") plt.xlabel("Delivery Time (Minutes)")
plt.ylabel("Frequency")
plt.show()
```

```
In [3]: #Task 2 – IPL Match Scores

scores = [145, 178, 192, 156, 210, 134, 167, 185, 201, 149,172, 195, 160, 218, 128, 181, 155, 203, 190, 142, 175, 198, 165, 212, 138, 187, 154, 176, 205, 193,147, 169, 182, 214, 132, 158, 196, 171, 189, 220, 151, 163, 179, 200, 144, 186, 157, 208, 194, 168]

plt.hist(scores, bins=5)
plt.title("IPL Match Scores - 5 Bins")
plt.xlabel("Runs")
plt.ylabel("Frequency")
plt.show()

plt.hist(scores, bins=10)
plt.title("IPL Match Scores - 10 Bins")
plt.xlabel("Runs")
plt.ylabel("Frequency")
plt.show()

plt.hist(scores, bins=15)
plt.title("IPL Match Scores - 15 Bins")
plt.xlabel("Runs")
plt.ylabel("Frequency")
plt.show()
```

#Observations 1. 5 Bins= Fewer and Wider groups Histogram looks simpler and less details 2. 10 Bins= More groups and more details about the distribution. 3. 15 Bins= Smaller and Narrower groups also shows more variations in the scores. Can also make histogram look more detailed Conclusion= Increasing the numbers of bins gives more details while fewer bins give s simpler overall view.